Er...Simon

A couple of days ago, steven was dreaming about langebaan and a weekend away with you and captain morgan.....

That's about as adventurous as steven gets.....last Friday night we went to a school camp out....

measurements were Taken, co-ordinates done, boards made to fit, and my daughters double bed mattress was then carried into the car.....

So that my darling prince didn't get achy muscles and sore bones.....

4 months thru Africa with my spoilt husbandENJOY.....u have my blessings,

c u in Greece,

I'll be the one with the Big sunglasses and small bikini!

Er... Steven

It looks like our project hasn't managed to progress beyond Stage 0.01 of our Risk Management Procedures

Please revert back with your Plan B

Well take your Toyota and send it back by ship its what you really bort it for.....

"BORT"...UMMM that's precisely what should happen to these dreams about driving through Africa.....abort them!
No ways am I running this bpm show, I will be frolicking in the waves in Greece, having a couple of extra marital affairs, whilst I await my husbands arrival.
I Am sure he will also be having lots of fun with all the Chinese hitchhikers he keeps telling me about.
Have u got rugged baby seats that will endure the trek thru Africa, u weren't planning on leaving your angels behind were you???
Was this email sophisticated enough?
Yours in Greece

Hi Ali

Steven and I need to take off about 4 months for our "African Expedition" and he's indicated that you'll be "running the BPM show".

As part of our the "African Expedition" Risk Management Procedures, it is incumbent upon me as project manager to do a ratification of this commitment made by Steven. Please send an affirmatory reply to this email, in sophisticated English, such that I know you are in agreement and it is indeed you that is replying.

Yours in Africa

Simon

okay I'll go with you are we going on bikes or in a bakkie?

how you going to get away from work for so long?

I suggested to Neil that I drive his Landy to Southampton for him, but he's already sold it here
